Letter to Expectant Parents

Hello. Our names are Kristy and Dan. We would like to start by saying that your decision to give life to your child is the most selfless gift imaginable. We respect and admire you for your courage to place your child for adoption. We know you are doing this because of the love you have for your baby. We hope that as you look through the next pages, you will see something that gives you the comfort and reassurance that we can lovingly guide, teach, and nurture your baby.

We were married in June 2010, after dating for about two years. Having both been previously married, our prayers were answered when we found one another. What we have learned about marriage and family is that faith, mutual respect, love, support, and common goals are essential to a healthy marriage. Dan and I love one another so very much and cannot imagine life without each other. We are also blessed with incredibly loving and supportive extended families. Our families and friends have pledged their support in helping us parent your birth child.

We were both raised in southern Minnesota. Dan grew up with a younger brother and his parents on a small hobby farm where he and his brother got into plenty of mischief while building go-carts, clubhouses, caring for their Shetland pony, and playing laser tag. Kristy grew up in a quiet neighborhood with a sister and her parents. She fondly remembers spending lots of time with her extended family at their cabin in northern Minnesota.

We have learned many things in our lives through good and bad. The best thing we learned about ourselves is that we have all the love, patience, understanding and hope a child could ever need.

We have a profile book that better explains ourselves, and our families and would be honored if you wanted to take a look.
